Whereas, Tristan Nussbaum recently competed at the 2017 World Martial Arts Games, Sept. 7-10, in Orlando, Florida, representing the United States in his division; and

Whereas, Tristan Nussbaum brought home a Gold Medal in Kata, a discipline of detailed choreographed patterns of movements, and a Silver Medal in Kumite, freestyle sparring literally meaning grappling hands; and

Whereas, Tristan Nussbaum is honored to be the youngest competitor to be awarded these medals in the history of the World Martial Arts Games; and

Whereas, Tristan Nussbaum demonstrated his focus, discipline and dedication by training seven days a week, up to two hours a day, in preparation for the competition; and

Whereas, Tristan Nussbaum is a first-grade student and Birmingham Bear at Birmingham Elementary School who fulfills the school’s mission to cultivate responsible learners who believe they are empowered to succeed.

Whereas, Tristan Nussbaum proudly represents the City of Wylie.

Now therefore, I, Eric Hogue, Mayor of the City of Wylie, Texas, on this the 26th day of September 2017, am honored to recognize for his outstanding accomplishments at the 2017 World Martial Arts Games, and call upon the community to honor Tristan and celebrate this phenomenal young athlete.
